A young two-tailed kitsune who was an American college student before he was eaten by a newly awakened six-tail. She reincarnated him as a kit and raised him in her realm, teaching him the basics of life as a kitsune. But he's still inexperienced, if you total up his two lives and count subjective time he's barely into his forties, he barely knows more than shapeshifting. However, he's still far more powerful than he was as a human, and it's made him a tad arrogant.

Now, before he was eaten and transformed he had a boyfriend he met on the internet. Alex would love to eat him and make him a bit of him, or reincarnate him as a kitsune if he could figure out how.

An orphan who grew up flitting from home to home and generally getting bounced around the System until she couldn't honestly say she had a strong connection to anyone at all, Brianna knew that she was only going to ever be able to truly rely on herself. As soon as she turned 18, she vanished from her home and school without a backwards glance, instead throwing herself bodily into what passed for both her job and the love of her life- music. Brianna possesses a certain slightly unearthly look, which she diligently enhances with strange hair and makeup choices, giving most the unsettling feeling that she's not quite human. Which, in fairness, she may not be- she never did track down the adoption records, or if she has an extant family, or even if her parents were human.

One argument against being purely and 100% human with no strangeness up her family tree a few branches is from the times she ate someone. She's very careful about it, to be sure; never anyone that most will miss, and generally not anyone she's been strongly associated with. Still, she has certain... instincts... that sometimes tell her it's time to feed and add someone else to her frame. Brianna's only too happy to obey. Having grown up poor as dirt, the modest income she gets from singing in whatever venue will have her seem to her like riches beyond dreams, but she of course always has an appetite for more money, more food, more fun... she's spent so long being miserable, that her entrance into the world of parties and social life has been a revelation that the young woman wants to bask in for as long and as hard as she can.

Born with a wanderlust that could overwhelm the most adventurous souls, Tzelle hails from Eastern Europe. Raised by a large and ever changing foster family, she warms quickly to people and makes fast friends with anyone she meets that doesn't immediately spurn her advances. When she came of age, her wanderlust inspired her to pursue her education across the oceans.

Her sense of adventure knows no bounds - and is almost entirely to 'blame' for why she sports a spotted coat of fur instead of the skin she was born in. In her mind, the only reason to lock a door is to make whatever's inside more interesting, and the Neko Project is as interesting as it gets.

Though she doesn't know it yet, she's also a vore. When that time comes, it's all but certain she'll pursue it with the same gusto that spurs her love of exploration. Whether she ends up exploring how people taste or exploring someone else's insides is still up in the air.
