Snacked on by a Jurassic apex.

Ah, vacation. Everyone's favorite thing, well.. Mine at least, anywhere warm was better than Britain.

I had just gotten dropped off at a national park within Italy. Gran Paradiso national park? I believe it's called.. Well, who cares! I'm on vacation, no time to care for names. I took a step out, stretching my limbs, cramped in a taxi for a couple of hours really doesn't do anyone good. I'd immediately pull out my phone, my fingers swishing through the contacts before pressing.

"Olivia? Hey, yeah, it's me, I'm finally here!" I'd say with glee in my voice, though a few moments later my face would drop to a grimace. "So.. You're already deep in the park. And.. It'd take a few hours for me to get to you?" I'd press my palm against my face, my hand slowly sliding down my face, wiping off the beads of sweat which had already formed."..Alright, at least I'll get to enjoy the scenery, haha.. Love you bye." I'd end the call, whipping my head back in annoyance, my shoulders would slump. "..Planned this vacation to hang out with my best friend.. And she.. Gosh.." I'd chunter away, as I walked through the entrance of the park, it was full, tourists and residents of the area making their way through. Some already leaving, and some only just entering.

I'd continue making my way through the park, my eyes glancing at some of the Fauna roaming through the lush surroundings. Camptosaurus prestwichii, beautiful animals. I'd take a moment to appreciate them, my elbows pressing against the fencing. "Man, if only my best friend was here to enjoy this with me!" I'd raise my voice, getting a couple of strange looks. I'd blush, forgetting that I was in public for a moment. I'd pick up my pace again, continuing my journey to Olivia.

Bzzt.. Bzzt bzzt..
Bzzt! Bzzt bzzt!

I'd zone back in, my hands fumbling for my pocket. I quickly pull the phone out of my pocket, holding it to my ear. "Well, well, well, feel guilty abandoning me yet?" I'd tease, standing still. Leaning my back against the fence. "Alright so, you've set up near where?" I'd raise my brow. "Ah, a limestone plateau, 'kay. Yeah, yeah, I should stop being so negative." I'd roll my eyes, "Alright, see you then mhm.. Love you bye." I'd end the call, pushing my self from the fence as I yet again continued moving along.

An hour would pass, I'd still be trotting along till I felt the ground shaking. I'd gulp, my eyes would slowly turn. Supersaurus lourinhanensis, also referred to as Dinheirosaurus*. My eyes would widen, I'd quickly run to the fence, pulling my phone out. I'd take photos, one after the other, it was a beautiful scene, a herd of them were traversing through the lush brush of the national park. Likely going to their nesting grounds, maybe this day wasn't so bad afterall.*

Eventually I'd pass through a more open area with a lot more animals around, a mix of mammals and dinosaurs. It was nice to see that the two vastly different animals could co-exist. I'd continue along, coming to realize that it felt.. A lot more empty now, not much .. Fauna around, and zero people to be seen. Oh well.. No worries? I was close to Olivia, I couldn't stop now, no matter how anxious I felt.

My legs would be shaking.. For some odd reason, suddenly I heard mass of stomping, My eyes would turn to the source, it was a herd of Camptosaurus.. The same ones from before? I'd freeze in fear once I saw it. Torvosaurus gurneyi the 5ton megatheropod heading my way. My heart felt like it stopped. Though the cries from the Camptosaurus would bring me back, I'd quickly try to move out the way, but it was too late. The Camptosaurus would smash through the fence, ragdolling me onto the the grassy floor. I'd black out for a few moments, eventually coming too.. My head throbbing.

I'd feel my head, looking at my hand . Blood. "..Fuck." This wasn't the vacation I was expecting. My legs were too hurt to move, so i'd lay there for a moment, watching the Camptosaurus in the distance, that had gotten away. I'd let out a sigh of relief, pulling out my phone, ready to ring Olivia before I saw it. It was staring right at me.I thought.. It had left. It hadn't.

I'd start shaking, my phone slipping out of my hand and dropping onto the floor. "O-Oh.. god.." I'd stutter, my voice as quiet as a mouse, I'd try shuffling backwards, trying to make my way back onto the pathway, it moved closer, I felt the ground shake. The Torvosaurus would tilt its head, its orange coloration mixing with the sunlight shining against it. As terrifying as it was.. It was a beautiful animal, an orange head.. Brown leopard-like spots covering its body. I wish I had seen it from.. A bit further away.

It clearly was hungry, having missed its chance to snatch a juicy Camptosaurus meal. Its large jaws would snap open, it simply huffing made me feel like I was going to fly away, I was in a bad situation, with.. Nothing I could do either. The Torvosaurus would move closer again, its maw carefully taking my legs into its mouth, once it did. It'd lift its head up, making me dangle within the air, before it flicked its head, my legs squeezed within its esophagus, it'd flick its head again once more, nearly impaling my head against its.. Giant teeth, I'd manage to save myself, my hands gripped tightly on its dagger like teeth. My heart would be pounding. My head would be full of thoughts of fear, "Oh god" Repeating nonstop.. Like a broken record, I'd hear ir growl.

It was clearly agitated with me gripping onto its teeth, it'd thrash its head around a little, causing me to lose my grip. I'd start slipping down its throat, my arms tightly squeezed against my sides as I slid down, it was tight.. And wet.. It was terrifying, though.. At this point, there was nothing I could do. Other than accept my fate. Eventually after a few moments, I'd slide down into its stomach, it was pretty cramped inside, though.. Its stomach was likely used to slabs of chewed up meat, rather than a whole person.. My chest would be forced against my face and my knees forced into my chest it was painful,I started to think about my actions in life which.. Led to this point, on the outside, my phone would be buzzing nonstop, Olivia was frantically calling me, to let me know of news ..

Which I had already found out. A Torvosaurus was active within the grounds of the National park, the muffled buzzing was the last thing I heard from the outside world as the Torvosaurus made its move again. Heading deeper within the National park, satisfied.
